(問題は次のページから始まります)

1. 次の英文を読んで、あとの設問に答えなさい。

Look up into the sky at night, and you will see stars all around you. Many of these stars give light to other planets. But only one of all these planets — Planet Earth — has life on it. Why is this? We can put the answer in one word: 【 】. If we look at our planet from far away, it is not yellow like the Sun, and it is not white like the Moon — it is blue. Blue is the color of the ocean. Perhaps we should change the name of our planet from Planet Earth to Planet Ocean.

First, our oceans are important because more animals live in the oceans than on the land. This is because there is so much food in the oceans. What is their food? As we know, the ‘first food’ in our oceans is plants. If you take all the plants out of the oceans, very few animals can live there. Animals need plants to live, and plants need water and sunlight to grow. Plants also need minerals, and the minerals come from the land. Second, although life in the oceans is possible only with help from the land, the opposite is also true: life on land is possible only with help from the oceans. We use 【 】 in our daily lives. Of course, without it, we will die. Also, it is essential when we cook meals, wash ourselves and so on.

Most importantly, the oceans and our climate are deeply connected. Because of our oceans, our planet is neither too hot nor too cold. Warm water goes to cold places and cold water goes to warm places. Life is possible everywhere on our planet because [1]. In addition, the oceans help make the weather. Where does rain come from? [2], and ocean winds carry the clouds over the land. There, the rain falls onto our fields and into our rivers.

As you can see, the blue part of our planet is very important. The oceans have lots of life in them and they help all life on land. Please remember how special the oceans are.
